Ritmo Audio Belt by the Nuvo Group

The belt, which fits snugly around the top and bottom of an expectant mother's belly, is easy to wear, lightweight and easily adjustable. The four, small speakers provide a sound level that is perfect for the mom and also very safe for babies.

Scientific evidence supports ties between music and human development. In fact, it is believed that hearing sounds and music while in utero increases a baby's coordination and cognitive development. I was surprised to learn that, after 3 months in the womb, a baby can not only process and remember sounds, but actually link them with emotion. Which is exactly why the Ritmo audio belt was developed.

The belt, which fits snugly around the top and bottom of an expectant mother's belly, is easy to wear, lightweight and easily adjustable. The four, small speakers provide a sound level that is perfect for the mom and also very safe for babies. By hooking the belt up to any mp3 player, you can listen to your own music and let it play for your baby as well (and it's actually in surround sound!) Easy to wear even when you're on the go, the Ritmo even comes in different colors. Better yet, after baby is born, the speakers can be removed from the belt and hooked up to a Ritmo crib, stroller, mobile, or toy box. This is one of those products I wish was around years ago! And while it's not yet on the market, it is available for pre-order. It would make a great holiday coming-soon surprise for any soon-to-be mom and baby.
