It's never too soon to start educating your child and exposing them to a variety of learning experiences. How close to the beginning of conception should you begin? The Ritmo Advanced Sound System by Nuvo is the most advanced and complete prenatal music player that delivers quality and saafe sound to the listener within.

"The Ritmo is composed of four speakers, a built-in iPod pocket, a 3.5mm headphone jack and with volume regulating abilities," according to Techchee. "The device is to be worn by a pregnant mom with the four speakers attached above and below the belly. It's currently priced at the $130 introductory price and will be raised to $150 later."

So for all those Philadelphian pregnant families out there, this is an opportunity for the baby and mother to bond together in a sensorial and emotional bond. This is supported by scientific research which concurs that music does have a positive contribution to human fetal development. Research in human fetal development shows that babies exposed to music, while in-utero, display advanced intelligence, coordination, and learning abilities.

It is believed that reactive listening starts at 17 weeks of age. So you have the option of playing classical, opera, pop and rock and show tunes, and see what the baby reacts to. I know I played all sorts of music for my daughter before she was born besides reading her stories and I truly believe she heard it all. It's just not limited to mothers. Other members of the family can play musical instruments, sing and just read stories.

There are some who believe this cannot be proven and it's not true but how on earth could it be anything but a positive experience for all participants to start the bonding experience? It sells for $129.99.

According to Ritmo Nuvo, "Ritmo was designed with your lifestyle in mind! Its soft fabric belt is lightweight, elasticized and supportive. Whether you're doing yoga, walking the dog, working or simply relaxing, Ritmo will allow you to interact with and experience sound with your child in a whole new way. After the baby is born, the Ritmo continues to adapt to your child's needs and changing environments with new Ritmo Applications for the crib, stroller and toys. Ritmo is the perfect pregnancy gift for yourself or that special pregnant woman in your life!"
