You're pregnant. You're eating right, getting your B-12, and doing pre-natal yoga. But have you started to refine your baby's music palate? The Ritmo Advanced Pregnancy Sound System is here to help -- it's a speaker-filled strap that attaches to your pregnant belly to connect your unborn child with your favorite tunes. While it's great to begin musically-indoctrinating your baby in utero, it's a steep price ($130) to pay for something you'd use for less than a year. What do you think -- is it too awesome to worry about the price or too expensive to consider buying?
